

JUST THE GOWN FOR A DRESS-IN-A-HURRY GIRL

By Betty Brown

Because it is so simply made that it can be slipped on over her head in a minute this clever little school frock should appeal to the girl who sometimes dresses in a hurry.

Navy blue gabardine is the slip pictured here, but the same model would make up attractively in brown corduroy. Black satin trims the roomy, practical pockets and the belt and makes a cuff for the lingerie sleeves. Thin sleeves, by the way are cool and comfortable for schoolroom wear. They should of course be attached to an underwaist rather than to the cloth gown.

NELSON PREDICTS DUPLICATE
OF TRIANGLE SHIRT CO. FIRE

Martin J. Isaacs, attorney for the clothing bosses, strutted out of Municipal Judge Flanagan's court yesterday very much satisfied with himself. He had won his case. Edward Strauss, who owns a shop on the sixth floor of a building at 400 S. Market st., had been discharged.

Oscar F. Nelson, state factory inspector, had had Strauss arraigned for keeping the doors of his shops locked in violation of the health, safety and comfort act.

Judge Flanagan read Section 15 of the act. "It says nothing about locks being on doors," he stated, with a puzzled air.

"But it provides that all doors must be constructed that they may be easily and immediately opened," said John Reed, representing the state.

"I'm afraid to confess that I cannot see anything pertaining to locks," said the judge.

After an hour's argument on this point Judge Flanagan adjourned court and went over to the factory with Nelson, Isaacs, Reed and Strauss. There Nelson pointed out how dangerous it was to keep the doors locked and how they were locked when he made his inspection.

The judge went back to his courtroom and discharged Strauss.

"Judge Flanagan's rulings in this and other cases practically nullifies the health, safety and comfort and garment acts," said Nelson. "If a lock isn't part of a door and manufacturers are permitted to keep the doors of their factories locked, one of these days we will have a disaster which will duplicate the Triangle Shirt Factory fire of New York."

No, Clarice, the issue is not the suffrage hat but what's under it.
